Sordid History of Ivan Hunter’s Machinations to Hamstring Sailors’ Union of the Pacific Endorsed By Regular Membership Meeting

As soon as from the Rank and File Committee came the news that Hunter’s men are in the interval of the outbreak of the strike, the members of the S.U.P. went to the meeting arranged by Hunter to hear his statement at the Listening Room. Hunter’s men were on the files and no one disputed their right to hear him. They gave the rank and file members an opportunity to ask questions of Hunter, but none were asked. They went on to discuss Hunter’s statement at the meeting. Hunter said the aim of the Rank and FileCommittee was to “get the union back to the inexperienced and untrained German crew.”

The statement was made that the Rank and File Committee were not interested in the welfare of the members of the union, but were interested in keeping the union alive. They believed that if the union were kept alive, the members would not be able to fight against the I.S.U.

The members of the S.U.P. were not interested in Hunter’s statement, as they believed that the union was in the best possible position to fight against the I.S.U.

Bio. Department, U.S.S. New York

Dear Sir:

The immediate past week has been marked by a marked increase in the number of sailors who have written to us regarding their experiences aboard various ships. These letters are of great interest to us, as they provide valuable information about the state of affairs aboard these vessels.

In particular, we have received reports of filthy cabins, inadequate food, and poor working conditions. Many sailors have expressed a desire to leave their ships as soon as possible and return to shore.

We would like to assure all our members that we are doing everything in our power to improve the conditions aboard these ships. We will continue to work towards this goal and will keep you updated on any developments.

Sincerely,

We are pleased to announce that our newly created advertising department has launched a new campaign aimed at increasing awareness of the issues facing sailors. The campaign features a series of powerful advertisements that highlight the plight of sailors and encourage them to take action.

In addition to the advertisements, we have created a new website that serves as a hub for all sailors and their allies. The website includes a range of resources, including articles, videos, and links to important organizations.

We encourage all sailors to visit the website and to share it with their friends and family. Together, we can make a real difference in the lives of sailors and ensure that they are treated with the respect and dignity they deserve.

Sincerely,

Owners Admit Low Wages

In the heat of the struggle, it is unkind of employers to be so unacquainted with the conditions of labor that they have no idea of any merit to a strike on the part of the workers.

Seniors, and those who were left to start in lusts of organized labor against the open shop, one now a general feeling such as the following statements from the “Shipping Register” for July 30, 1926, and quoting from the New York Journal of Commerce is a somewhat typical text from a port.

“There are two main issues involved. The first is that wages at these ports are well below the average prevailing elsewhere. The employer can make a strong case for such a comparison, even though the cost of living at these ports averages considerably lower than in major shipping centers. Certainly the shipowners and workers should be ready to appreciate this much, if they wish to stabilize their industrial relations. The grant of concessions elsewhere may prevent further complications in their union meetings.

As to the first point, it is quite clear that despite the methods as described with trade union war, when obtaining in the South Atlantic and Gulf ports, the motive for raising wages is predicated upon the same consideration that the workers in the Pacific Coast have been the leaders to suggest that the giving of a crunch will still tend to the breaking of the strike.

As to the second point, the matter is the same. Without any effort at concealment, the counselor in this battle against the strike can only feel happy with the points that the union will, in so far as the employers are concerned, that they will be glad to acquire them. If they wish to stabilize their industrial relations. The grant of concessions elsewhere may prevent further complications in their union meetings.

Now as to the first point, it is quite clear that despite the methods as described with trade union war, when obtaining in the South Atlantic and Gulf ports, the motive for raising wages is predicated upon the same consideration that the workers in the Pacific Coast have been the leaders to suggest that the giving of a crunch will still tend to the breaking of the strike.

Orange County Justice

The completely unconditional release of 115 citrus workers who had been arrested and held incommunicado since July 5th in jails of Orange County shows how brutal the employers use these jails in an attempt to break the strike.

These workers were charged with robbery, were beaten and the police officers, held from obtaining legal aid in direct violation of their constitutional rights, yet when they were brought to court, there was not the slightest idea on the part of the defendants that they were in jail.

The jail had no recourse but to release the entire group. The framed character of the charges was transparent enough to cause the judge to consider rightly the lack of evidence against these persued workers.

The horrors of Hitler’s concentration camps and Mussolini’s methods to achieve the same end are not far removed from us as evidenced by these events. It is hard to believe, but here comes the real story, that in a country where the police is the primary protection of the people against the excesses of the leaders of business and the courts are the judges of the people. The police had no recourse but to release the entire group. The framed character of the charges was transparent enough to cause the judge to consider rightly the lack of evidence against these persued workers.
