How Bills Are Killed

There are two ways of blocking a bill in the Senate when the enemies of that bill are not numerous enough to vote it down. One is to emancipate it with amendments, making exceptions so small and numerous that the bill cannot be passed without them. This has been done twice in the House. The other is to require more or less that the same thing be done in the Senate. This is the method that has been adopted in the House. One or both of these methods has been used in the House, too.

Both these plans of action are being used in the Senate to kill all bills with the exception of one or both of these bills.

The Work of a Church Assembly

The 156th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America just held its annual meeting. While there were some differences as to the interpretation and application of the laws of the church, the theme of the meeting was the struggle for common sense in one big matter of taxation. The assembly had called for collective bargaining between employees and employers, and the AFL is now represented on the council of this council.

Relief In the States

Next time any talking jackass tells you that all relief is tired out, just ask him if there aren't still some places where the citizens are being helped.

That three separate states, Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky, were in a state of relief, while the state of Indiana was not, is the situation out of which the assembly had called for collective bargaining between employees and employers. The assembly, by the way, is including many of the same people who are doing the same thing in other states.

As a matter of fact, the meeting was complete—and this change of heart effective, it was said. The reason for this change of heart was not mentioned.

Bromdeins Wins Long Fight

Mr. Justice Brandeis, some weeks ago, saw his 26-year struggle for something to which he had devoted a lifetime crowned with success. In 1922, the Supreme Court, by a vote of 5 to 0, declared that the United States income tax of 1913 was unconstitutional, because it did not tax the profits of all companies, which operated on lands leased from the United States. Ten years later, in 1932, the Supreme Court, by a vote of 5 to 4, declared that the United States income tax of 1913 was constitutional, because it did not tax the profits of all companies, which operated on lands leased from the United States. It was this decision which led to the change of heart of the meeting.

In a word, the meeting was complete—and this change of heart effective, it was said. The reason for this change of heart was not mentioned.

Scores of headlines in the Hearst press and the Pacific News Service are in the spirit of the administration's campaign against the Railroad Labor Association.

What they do not tell us is that the administration is not the only one with an interest in the matter. Barron, who failed to produce any evidence of a violation of the anti-picketing ordinance, was forced to admit that he had been a member of the railroad labor union for many years.

The railroad labor union has been listed in the administration's campaign against the Railroad Labor Association.
