Overwhelming caucus vote for dock pact

SAN FRANCISCO—With Congress poised to consider the fate of the 1990 Farm Bill, the ILWU is gearing up to apply the maximum amount of pressure to ensure its passage.

The bill would extend the current US sugar program, which is of vital importance to the ILWU, said ILWU International President Jim Herman. “Both Local 142 in Hawaii and Local 6 in Northern California represent thousands of workers whose jobs would be jeopardized without this legislation.”

Herman warned that, in both the Senate and the House, lobbyists representing the “sugar-using” industry will be attempting to gut the program with one or more floor amendments. “The International, in cooperation with other affected unions, is working hard to defeat these amendments,” Herman said.

NO ALTERNATIVES

All members are advised to contact their congressmen and senators immediately to urge their support for the US sugar program without the amendments that would weaken it. The following points should be made in your communications:

1. This is a major jobs issue for the ILWU; there are no alternative jobs for our sugar members in Hawaii.
2. The program involves no payments to growers, and is required to operate at no cost to US taxpayers.
3. The program is necessary because of sugar dumping on the world market by the European Community, and violations of the most basic labor rights in certain sugar-producing countries, such as the Dominican Republic and the Philippines, which give these countries an unfair competitive advantage.

Herman said that his members are prepared to apply the pressure to defeat these amendments, and that they had a strong mandate from the rank and file to resist them.

The caucus vote tells the whole story,” said Herman. “The committee did what it was supposed to do—protect the standard of living of the membership, enhance their job security and make some real gains in the pension area. Maintenance of health and welfare benefits was absolutely critical.”

Balloting should take place in all longshore and clerk locals beginning July 27, 1990 and ending August 6, 1990. Official results must be mailed to the International no later than August 8, 1990. They will be certified by the coast balloting committee on August 13, 1990.

Health care, pension gains key

SAN FRANCISCO—Delegates to the ILWU longshore, clerks and walking boss caucus, meeting here July 9-13, overwhelmingly approved a new three-year ILWU-PMA agreement providing substantial wage hikes and pension improvements, maintenance of health and welfare benefits, an expanded safety program and other improvements.

Delegates voted 96-6 to recommend acceptance by the rank and file. They left the caucus with a special Dispatchers contract supplement to be distributed to the membership prior to a rank and file referendum.

THE WHOLE STORY

“The caucus vote tells the whole story,” said Herman. “The committee did what it was supposed to do—protect the standard of living of the membership, enhance their job security and make some real gains in the pension area. Maintenance of health and welfare benefits was absolutely critical.”

Balloting should take place in all longshore and clerk locals beginning July 27, 1990 and ending August 6, 1990. Official results must be mailed to the International no later than August 8, 1990. They will be certified by the coast balloting committee on August 13, 1990.

John Pandora, Local 13, Wilmingtion, was caucus chairman. Bill Ward, Local 40, Portland, was secretary.

Members of the coast negotiating committee were International President James Herman, Vice-President Randy Vekich, Coast Committee members Richard Austin and Bill Ward, and International Secretary-Treasurer Curt McClain. Also: Larry Wing, Local 10, San Francisco; Norm Parks, Local 8, Portland; David Arian, Local 13, Wilmingtton; Dick Marzano, Local 23, Tacoma; Pat Vukich, Local 19, Seattle; Glen Ramis Ske, Local 24, Aberdeen; Richard Rancore, Local 4, Vancouver; Jess Herrera, Local 46, Port Hueneme; Larry Clark, Local 40, Portland, and David Miller, Local 63, Wilmington.

They were assisted by International Research Director Ruse Bergmann and Coast Committee Administrative Assistant Lucienne O’Keefe.

Members of the coast safety committee were: Phil Lelli, Local 23, Tacoma (chair); Richard Connolly, Local 34, San Francisco; Timmy Chavez, Local 29, San Diego; Bob Rogers, Local 92, Portland; Frank White, Local 5, Portland; and Bill Watkins, Local 10, San Francisco.

Hotel pact ratified

HONOLULU—After a whirlwind, statewide contract vote, ILWU Local 142 has secured the unanimous approval of its members for the union’s new contract with the Hawaii Council of Hotels.

As reported in last month’s issue of The Dispatcher, Local 142 reached tentative agreement with the Council on May 31, encompassing some 5,500 hotel workers employed at eight major Neighbor Island hotels. The new, five-year pact has been called the “best ever” by both management and union members.

The new contract includes a number of gains for members, including:

- A wage raise of 7% for hotel workers in the first year, and an additional 3% for workers in the second year.
- An increase in the number of paid vacations, from five to seven for members with more than five years of service.
- An increase in the number of paid holidays, from five to seven.
- An increase in the number of paid sick days, from three to five.
- An increase in the number of paid personal days, from three to five.

The members of Local 142 were represented by International President Jim Herman, Vice-President Randy Vekich, and International Secretary-Treasurer Curt McClain.

The new contract was ratified by an overwhelming margin, with over 90% of members voting in favor of the agreement.

ILWU longshore division caucus delegates ratified contract with an overwhelming 86-6 vote.

Out of work? Out of luck!

WASHINGTON—While George "Read My Rhetoric" Bush steelshits himself for another round of his intellectual Black Caucus offers threefold proposal to issues in the labor movement, the average union member paid benefits.

Bill offers protection to strikers

Going to the bargaining table without the ability to call a strike is like sitting at a poker table without any face cards in your hand: you can play the game but you're likely to end up poorer than when you started.

The right to strike and the bargaining advantage it gives to workers has raised living standards for millions of American workers throughout much of the 20th century. Strikes have paved the way for union representation in workplaces, for better wages and benefits, for fairness on the job.

But the right to strike is under serious attack. During the 1990s, many important

STOCKTON, Calif. — "We worked for a crazy man," said Del Thigpen. "He spoiled on us, didn't trust anybody, made our lives miserable. But with the ILWU on our side, this was just that kind of harassment — along with verbal abuse, unfair promotions and layoffs, and no pay raises — that drove the workers to the brink of mutiny.

It was just that kind of harassment — along with verbal abuse, unfair promotions and layoffs, and no pay raises — that drove the workers to the brink of mutiny.

But it was just that kind of harassment — along with verbal abuse, unfair promotions and layoffs, and no pay raises — that drove the workers to the brink of mutiny.

We caught secretary Mary Lou San-senour off guard at her desk. Behind her is Local 13 BA Ray Familathe. "He spied on us, didn't trust anybody, made our lives miserable. But with the ILWU on our side, this was just that kind of harassment — along with verbal abuse, unfair promotions and layoffs, and no pay raises — that drove the workers to the brink of mutiny.

The ship's captain ordered his crew to tie up the vessel. "But we convinced the crew that their job was sailing, not sitting around," said Harris. "We told them to come on down to the dock and we'd start a new contract.

The crew members gathered on the dock and started negotiating a new contract. "It was a rollercoaster ride," said Harris. "But we finally came to an agreement and signed the contract.

The contract called for a 5% raise in wages, a new health care plan, and a new pension plan. "It was a huge relief," said Harris. "We had been fighting for these things for years and finally we got them.

The new contract was ratified by the workers and they went back to work. "It was the most well-organized, most disciplined strike I've ever seen," said Harris. "We had a lot of support from the community and we were able to negotiate a great contract.

As the workers returned to work, the company was forced to operate with a reduced workforce. "We had to let go of some people," said Harris. "But we were able to negotiate a fair contract and we're all happy with it now.

The ILWU Local 6 strike was a huge victory for the workers. "It was the beginning of something great," said Harris. "We're going to continue to fight for our rights and we're going to win."
Economy will derail on his watch and possibly before the 1992 election. Every few centuries civilization—including roads, education, health care, and sanitation—requires 20th century revenues. Most of all, he's already made it to the top, so no one in this country needs to worry about the truth about taxes. It's not his fault if his political convenience has a different timing than his allies in Congress.

So now the only question is what kind of tax increase we'll get—and here the President can still be true to his party. He'll try to portray it as a tax cut paid by his political opponents. 80% of the American people want to increase revenue without cutting into corporate profits or high incomes. Just slap excise increases on the purchase of gasoline, cigarettes, beer, wine, and liquor, and you can raise more than $21 billion a year without changing anyone's April tax return. A new consumption tax on all purchases would bring in even more. And workers will pay the bulk of these taxes, simply because they have to spend a much larger percentage of their income than wealthier people.

Republican and conservative Demo- crats will support this approach. And they'll push it for big numbers, since they know that the dream of lowering the capital gains tax for big investors is fading fast.

RESTORE FAIRNESS

The right to do less—except from cutting military spending—is to restore fairness to the tax code. The most obvious correction needed here is to end the outrageous two-bracket system imposed in 1986—whereby workers and everyone earning more than $109,000 pay exactly the same top rate: 28%.

Higher brackets should be restored for higher incomes and for corporations. In addition, capital gains and estate and inheritance taxes should be closed; the corporation minimum tax should go, and giveaways for mergers, runaways, and multinational taxes should be eliminated.

"I like George Bush very much and support him and always will. But I disagree with him when he talks about a kinder, gentler America. I think if this nation gets any kinder or gentler, it's literally going to cease to exist."

Port and Planning Commissions work with union

ILWU works to save toxic clean-up firm

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO—Members of ILWU locals 2 and 26 are fighting to save a company which has provided hundreds of jobs for them over the years, and which performs an increasingly important service to this community.

They are concerned that H&H Ship Cleaning Co. and its subsidiary, H&H Environmental Services, will be done in by ambitious plans for housing and commercial construction near the company's site just south of Bay Bridge.

Port 2 members have clean and recycle underground gas tanks and increasingly are called upon to treat and recycle other oil-based and other chemical-based toxics.

FOOT SOLDIERS

"We basically are the foot soldiers in the war to save the environment. Someone's got to handle this stuff," according to the Local 2 President Annie Coleman.

Formed in 1980 by former steelworker Bill Harris, the firm for years hired Local 2 members to clean holds and holds and perform other traditional shipworkers work. "We saw many job opportunities declining," says his son, Will Harris, who now runs the company, and "formed H&H Environmental Services in 1983 to get into the whole field of recycling."

Today, H&H runs a state of the art facility employing up to 100 people and cleaning up out of the Local 2 hall, cleaning spills, cleaning out old factory sites, recycling gas tanks and transporting toxic wastes to dump sites.

A tenant of the Port of SF, the company also is equipped to handle emergency clean ups of marine and land spills.

PROUD TO BE UNION

"Local 2 made the change with us," says the year and a half Harris has been working in cooperation. "We're proud to be a union company. They've provided us with outstanding people who care about what they're doing. We'll go toe-to-toe with any non-union outfit and beat them."

The feeling is mutual. "H&H has worked with us, they've been straight," says Coleman. "We haven't had to fight with them over things like proper safety protection for our people. They're willing to go that extra step over there to do more than they have to under the law to protect the people who work for them."

But today the company's ability to operate is threatened by the Mission Bay plan which would convert as much as 1/3 of H&H's space to offices, a park, and housing units.

"It just isn't economically viable for us to operate in such a small space," said Harris. "And it's not really possible for us to move. All our permits are state specific. It would take years to relocate, income the Local receives from the space.""

The city needs H&H," says Local 2 chief steward Cleveland Valrey. "The city needs the jobs, and it needs the environmental win. There's a growing need for companies like this. It would be unfortunate if they dwindle it out of the city."

We perform a service for the whole region, and we can do more if you let us stay here."

"At H&H Environmental Services, Local 2 members Tony Mattus and Ryder Anderson scrape service station tanks. At right, Local 2 President Annie Coleman with Theodore Manuel."

Union convention held

Local 26 delegates revamp dues

LOS ANGELES—Local 26 delegates met here June 23 and adopted a program to assure adequate funding of the local in the years to come. "The convention was extremely successful," said President Luisa Gratzi.

Grazti chaired the meeting and gave an enlightening report on the business of the local. Stressing the importance of membership involvement in the day-to-day activities of the union, she detailed the practical and economic problems confronting the Local: a wide geographical area, many contracts, grievances, and arbitrations, and rising costs.

Local 26 secretary-treasurer Harry Danovich gave a "penny for penny" breakdown of 1989 income and expenses, "so that the members could see how their dues were spent and why." Challenging the Local's financial resources, he said, are increased costs of arbitrations, legal representation, and per capita payments to the International. Danovich also offered a proposed budget for 1990.

Grazti reported on arbitrations handled since 1986, and discussed pending arbitrations and upcoming negotiations, which are critical areas of commitment for the Local. "The Union must be able to support the members' demands," she said.

This includes a dues increase. The amount of income to the Local received is inversely related to the membership's needs or administrative costs."

"We're fighting the thorny issue of raising dues, convention delegates supported both an increase in the dues and an increase to help the Local keep pace. The dues structure they decided on, although new for Local 26, is highly common in other unions," Gratzi emphasized. "Some members in the highest income brackets will be paying more, but, ultimately, it will be the fairest way to ensure our financial security. And the Local won't have to keep coming back to the members every year or two as costs continue to rise."

The proposal is subject to ratification at the general membership meeting scheduled this month.

Union officers included International secretary-treasurer Curt McClain, who spoke of the difficulties facing workers and unions today, Local 26 President Jim Varga reported on important changes in U.S. Labor Law. Delegates enjoyed a lively discussion of the issues before them and refreshments served up by Local: coffee, soft drinks, donuts, cookies, cold cuts—and a hot spaghetti lunch prepared by vice president Larry Jefferson.

Rick was bent on destruction. He exceeded his father as a member of ILWU among the dockers. Rosie Brand is a woman of passion. She dreams of devotion—a by-product of the carefree romanticism of old Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers movies and the heady social whirl Rosie once dreamed of doing before," she said fondly. "I belonged there. He belonged to me. But his letters said it all: he apologized for hurting me and was real clear about staying away from other people who drink or use. He said our whole life would have to change. It did.

Thirty days into treatment, Rick got permission to see Rosie as part of his courtship convention. Rosie went with him. "They were drunk all the time. They met at bars, soft drinks, everyone was dancing and having fun. I belonged there. He belonged here."

The good times they shared at the convention turned into a nightmare. At monthly ADRP dinners, they made friends with people who could party with the best of them, and still stay sober doing it. The fellowship they needed to keep "feeding the program back to them" got them from some of their daily meetings: heroes for families of addicts, his for the addicts themselves.

Their first sober Christmas eve together was a revelation to both of them. "He said he needed to go to a meeting that night, and it was OK," I had a sober husband, and that's all that mattered.

Today, 5 years later, Rick is clean and sober. Rosie is by his side. They both want to spread the good news, "not to preach," she said, "but to be there for people like us." She's the voice at the end of the Nar-Anon Hotline, and a frequent guest speaker at ADRP and other rehab seminars; she's an ADRP volunteer coordinator for Local 13.

"He's doing so many things he never dreamed of doing before," she said fondly. "He's into the gym now, and he was never much for exercise."

SSA safety scholarship winners

SEATTLE—Both the 1990 SSA Safety Scholarship Awards and the 1990 Melvin Steenberg Memorial Scholarship Award were presented at the June 14 stopwork meeting of ILWU longshore Local 19.

The SSA Safety scholarships were awarded to Angela Kae Halonen-Webb, daughter of Charley Hanke, Katrina Schwindeman, daughter of Doug Smith, Donald Almer, son of Bob Almer; and Alison Franze, daughter of Theo Franz. Rick Lacey, Washington Safety Director for Stevedoring Services of America presented each recipient with a check for $775.

The SSA Safety Scholarship was designed as an incentive program to promote safe working practices. SSA agreed to donate $1,000 per quarter, less $25 deducted for each injury sustained by a child of SSA. Over the years this safety scholarship incentive program has provided children of Local 19 members in the Port of Seattle generous scholarship awards to help offset the cost of higher education.

Leonder Young, daughter of Woy Young, the recipient of the Melvin Steenberg Memorial Scholarship received a scholar- ship check of $775. Patricia Skiffington, graduated from University this fall.

The Melvin Steenberg Memorial Scholarship is named after a retired member of Local 19 who died in 1989, leaving the local as a beneficiary of a $25,000 death benefit policy. With cooperation from the Seattle ILWU Pensioners Club, Local 19 implemented the scholarship fund for children of Local 19 members. The fund is self-perpetuating in hopes that Local 19's children's benevolence.

Old timers blast Social Security cuts

SAN FRANCISCO—The San Francisco Bay Area, ILWU Pensioners have sent letters to their elected representatives in the House and the Senate opposing proposed cuts in the Social Security cost-of-living adjustment (COLA).

"The people on Social Security are least able to afford any cuts whatsoever," wrote a club president. But Rotch said, "Cost of living has skyrocketed to all-time highs."

Rotch says all ILWU pensioners and their families should take similar action and "fight any attempt to cut our COLA."

In Memory of Harry

And now it's time for fund advice to say, "My Longies I loved you black or white, day or night I expect you all back rain or shine to work your life upon the pier and remember who your friends were."

And remember who your friends were — L Perkins Local 13, retired.

S&L robbery

I thought I was about as enraged as I could get about the S&L, but when I read, quite by accident, that last April the Senate voted 56 to 48 against a proposal by Senator Alan Dixon to tax $30 million that was supposed to promote tourism in Panama (how ridiculous can you get?) and switch it to a fund to hire more investigators and lawyers to go after S&L crooks. It has taken me three days to cool down enough to start bemoaning the loss.

I began this morning by writing to Sena- tor Bob Frazier in Maryland demanding to know how they voted on Dixon's proposal.

Mandela, in Oakland, thanks ILWU for years of support

OAKLAND—A capacity crowd packed the ILWU warehouse Local 6 East Bay hall June 30 immediately following the huge— and joyous—rally at the Oakland Coliseum for South African human rights leader Nelson Mandela.

Streaming into the hall, trade unionists and others from all over the Bay Area talked excitedly about Mandela’s appearance on the last leg of his whirlwind US tour. Many observed his special tribute to the ILWU: “the first to boycott” South African cargoes, he told 58,000 admirers at the stadium and millions more watching television at home.

The ILWU tradition of support for the anti-apartheid movement was in full evidence at labor’s reception for the Mandela delegation, sponsored by Local 6 in cooperation with the Northern California Mandela Reception Coalition.

COLLECTIVE RESPONSIBILITY

Local 6 president Jim Ryder opened the proceedings, briefly noting labor’s “collective responsibility” to end apartheid, then introduced ILWU longshore Local 10 board of trustees member Leo Robinson, “who has been a sparkplug for change in South Africa.”

Robinson, a key leader in the ILWU boycott and other anti-apartheid protests, served as co-chair of the event, and introduced the speakers and several guests.

State labor federation executive secretary-treasurer Jack Henning’s rousing speech was punctuated with bursts of enthusiastic cheers and applause. He lambasted President George Bush’s administra tion to Mandela about resorting to violence in the battle for equality and self-determination.

Noting that the US “was founded in armed rebellion” and has “a long history” of war-mongering, particularly in Latin America, Henning said: “Who are we to tell Mandela that he has no right to urges armed resistance?”

ILWU International secretary-treasurer Curt McClain recalled the ending phrase of an old song—“the working class shall save the human race”—and observed: “If there has ever been a case where working people have been behind the struggle for freedom, it is in South Africa.”

 McClain introduced the featured speaker, Bachana Mokwena, of the Coalition of South African Trade Unions (COSATU), vice president Chris Dlamini, who was unable to attend. Mokwena was a powerful presence as he described the indignities black workers suffer at the hands of their white oppressors.

“We formed COSATU,” he said, “so that they will hunger no more. We are entering a new chapter in South Africa because of the strength of the working people behind the trade union federation. It is our belief that history does not forgive the strong if they don’t stand up to fight. We are strong because we are with you and because we are prepared to give up our lives.”

At the end of his speech, Mokwena was presented with ILWU hats, jackets and t-shirts for Mandela, Dlamini and himself. Local 10 secretary-treasurer Lawrence Thibeaux announced that, at the Local’s June meeting, the membership voted to make Mandela and Dlamini honorary members of the Local.

The reception was honored by the presence of many special guests, including: Albin Gruhn, president of the California Labor Federation, AFL-CIO; Chuck Mack, president, Teamsters-Joint Council 7; Leon Harris, secretary-treasurer ILWU Local 6; Annie Coleman, president, ILWU Local 2; Bill Proctor, ILWU Local 19; Seattle, Jose Medina, executive director, Instituto Laboral de la Raza; executive officers of the International, ILWU Northern California Regional Director LeRoy King also represented the union on the Mandela Reception Committee.
